A. L. Henry Writes a Letter.

TUTTLE, OKLAHOMA, May 21. Editor Hazel Green Herald:

I am just home from a trip to Old Kentucky, where I go for a vacation. While I was gone a small cyclone visited our town and took some houses, barns and small buildings, moved a large hotel from its foundation and turned it half around on Friday morning, and a fire broke out and took a stone block from the center of the is almost a name and no town. But we have good people that are full of energy, so we will soon have a better town than ever. I was gone twenty days. I left here May 1st and stopped in Springfield, St. Louis and Lexington, and can say that I never met with such a fine bunch of new friends coast as I met in Lexington. I blew into Cannel City on Thursday, May 7th, and there met Clarence Cecil, which was a surprise to escorted by him to Grassy Creek through the rain and mud, which is the limit in Kentucky. We landed at Frank Cecil's and there was water-bound for three days, uncle, J. L. Henry, and his store ou the hillside with so many different signs tacked about on it, such as "Granger Twist," Faultless Starch," Thread for Sewing," 'Wool Left, Here for Ezel Card Mill," and enjoyed seeing this old uncle stick both hands to the very bottom of his pocket and say, 'By-jacks, I cleared 15c. today," which was an unusual big day to make so much; and of course Uncle Nias Lovelace was there to see that no one told a larger coon, bear or whisky story than the one he told before.

On Sunday I went to what is known as Grassy Chapel to church. There we heard a real good sermon and everybody seemed happy. The sun had shown most of the morning, and the little wrens had built their nests over the windows of the old church that had stood for so long as a landmark on the creek. On Wednesday Misa Lillie Cecil and myself visted her old uncle, Bob Cecil, who tried so long to live among the western tuffs. I think he was thoroughly disgusted and returned to the east and is now located at Hazel Green, one of the nicest small towns in Kentucky, not only for its being located on Red river, for the people country surrounding the small

While in Hazel Green I visited Swango Springs, which was one of the most enjoyable features of my trip. We took dinner with Bob Cecil, my first time to eat with him in almost a quarter of a century, and was surprised to see him looking so young. Time has not changed him to look even one day older.

I am not surprised at the common wealth of Kentucky people, for I saw from the car windows many farmers struggling to reach the tops of those pike-peaked farms in pursuit of pleasure and wealth while so many industries are staring them in the face from all parts of the country.

I made ready for my trip home, started on Friday, May 15th, and landed home feeling some worsted from my trip, but now I am in high glee with a fine business. I still have an open spot in my mind for a thought of dear Old Kentucky and its many kind and noble people, and I am sure I cannot forget Kentucky and its greatest people.
